

Escaping Perils Through Paint

Painting at first was my escape from the perils of this world. Every stroke of the paintbrush would soothe my OCD. Paintings were my only friend through thick and thin. They gave me a sense of life. I started painting when I was around 16. I remember how hard it was to buy some paints and canvas. With time I became an introvert and it was the major hurdle in the recognition of my art.

I mostly painted landscapes since my life was uneven as them. My main area of expertise has always been the natural artist who has aimed to portray the magnificence of the natural scenic beauty. I believe this has the reason behind the appreciation of my art. Over time, I have been doing 3-D Oil Paintings, giving every stroke life and enhancing the viewer's experience.

I am now a much more confident and accomplished artist who has had many triumphs in the field of art. I know, I am not the only one but that was my story. In the end, what matters is the peace that we all strive for. I believe I have found the peace of my life. Nowadays, I teach many students who are keen to learn about art and paintings.

If you liked my paintings and want to buy a piece, please contact me.
