

Artistic Creativity,
The Core Of My Being

Artistic creativity is as natural as breathing, it is the core of my being. The label of artist is the one I'm comfortable with and not the medicalised ones I've been given for the conditions which I have no option other than to live with. An activity that I use to engage in a positive direction and gives me support and a voice.

My art is underlined by my interest in human anatomy and the practical experience of how the body works which I gained through human cadaver dissection. I apply a sculpturally destructive approach to my work via collage, whilst considering the intimacy and secretive spaces of the body and its relationship with the world in order to reconstruct a new image.

My works are constructed with ubiquitous low brow materials like tissue paper, packaging papers, used envelopes and card, inks and paint. So some works will cost me just the time to gather them, so you can start your new direction without being concerned over costs.

All content is ©Copyright of the artist named above and reproduced for Disabled Artists' Network CIC with their permission.

Promoting Creativity As A Coping Mechanism For Disability