

The concept of my paintings is based on the theme of light and darkness.

I always paint with thoughts that cannot be expressed in words. I think it is important to feel, just like poetry. I think that abstract paintings are those that are seen from the heart.

Surprisingly, the world of abstraction is hidden in the human mind, in nature, and in many familiar places around us, and depending on the viewer's state of mind, the view changes, like the colours of a chameleon.

In today's world where people are forced to refrain from doing things because of Corona, the desire to seek peace of mind is related to human stress. In a world where we can't say that something beautiful is beautiful, I paint abstract paintings to give myself and other people a little peace of mind. For example, I have been painting pictures that cannot be put into words, such as the colourful flowers in a vase in my room, or my thoughts as I gaze at the sea. I hope everyone will enjoy my unique sensibility, which is not something I was taught.

Taichi Nagayama

All content is ©Copyright of the artist named above and reproduced for Disabled Artists' Network CIC with their permission.

